Mr. Richard Johnson:

I read an article quoting you in the newspaper stating you would vote for Ted Kennedy. Your religion is showing! How could you think of trying to elect a man who is probably a murderer? The facts at Chappaquidick were never really divulged, I'm sure. That was far worse than has happened to our president. No doubt the girl's parents were paid plenty to forget the death of their daughter! Money talks, and I feel sure it talked plenty in that episode, or else their lives were threatened, if they tried to find out what really happened. It was certainly hushed up in a hurry and what really happened was never allowed to be made public. So one can believe that Ted Kennedy in some way killed his lady friend, or mistress. No doubt she was pregnant, and he had to dispose of her. He was probably too drunk to know what happened. But we certainly don't need a murderer for a president. But I guess a Catholic would vote for a Catholic, regardless of what he is — even a murderer. But as long as you or your mother has the "dough" to pay to cover up the facts, it seems one can get by with anything in this world. At least the President hasn't been in a drunken orgy like that, and caused someone's death.
